

Sprill

Strap into your mini-sub and dive in to a marble-popping adventure! Sprill challenges you to match colored marbles as they roll through underwater tubes. Earn powerful upgrades that can clear the screen in a spectacular display of visual effects. Do well, and you'll earn the ability to use your assistant, a cute tropical fish that can eliminate marbles with lightning strikes and more. Starring charming new characters, Sprill is sure to delight your entire family!

Sprill's alien captors direct him to a series of underwater locations to begin searching for clues to unravel the mystery of the pearl. If Sprill is successful, the pearl can be used save the planet, but it won't be easy to find.

This new hidden object game begins when the aliens send you to a sunken ship to start your quest. A list of items to find within each setting will appear on the side of the scene and you will have a (rather generous) time limit to find the needed items. Search high and low to find everything by scanning the setting and clicking on the items as you locate them. If you get stuck, you can use a hint to help you, but don't waste them or you might find yourself out of luck.

The various items are all hidden within the background. Some are very easy to find but others take a lot of hunting and hawk-like vision to spot. However, within almost every level, there are additional hints you can earn by finding variously shaped and colored question marks and clicking on them. These will become very useful as the timer runs low or if you have to find items that you aren't familiar with, such as a balalaika or numbers of amphorae.

After every few levels, you will have to complete a different mechanical puzzle in order to proceed to the next location. These puzzles are similar to the ones found in the Mystery Case Files games, though far less challenging. There weren't very many of them, which is a shame as they break up the monotony nicely.
